

Amazing Glass Home on the Edge of Sea and Rock

Amazing is clearly an understatement. Have you ever, in your wildest dreams, imagined a house like this? Perched over the ocean and built of glass walls - unobstructed views of the ocean for miles and miles and miles. And open terraces - have we mentioned all the open terraces? Calypso house, by SOMA architects, hangs over the Mediterranean Sea. Built in 2014, on the coast of Lebanon, the house is primarily constructed from powder coated aluminum and yup, you guessed it, glass. There is a great deal of space inside Calypso - appearances are deceiving. Over 10,000 square feet, in fact (1,000 square meters). And the modern interior has been kept sleek and stark in style. Because of course, the view is the thing. For miles and miles and miles.
